Author: Ramya Pai

Level 3

Fatima et Savio vivent près de la mer à Goa, en Inde.

« Fatima, tu viens jouer dehors ? On est dimanche ! » demande Savio.

« Savio, arrête tout de suite de faire du bruit, je termine mon devoir sur les angles droits ! »

« Des angles droits ? Qu'est-ce que c'est ? Et des angles gauches, il y en a aussi ? »

Des angles gauches, ça n'existe pas. Mais des angles droits, c'est comme ceci...

– « Ah c'est comme la lettre rouge sur le scooter de papa ? » demande Savio.

« Regarde, il ya un angle droit sur la croix de l'église » s'exclame Savio

« Les lampadaires aussi font un angle droit ! » s'amuse Savio.

« Très bien, essaie de trouver encore d'autres angles droits », lui répond Fatima.

« Les transats ! » crie Savio.

« CHUTTT »

« Mais non, pas les transats, Savio, murmure Fatima, mais l'oncle et la tante forment bien un angle droit chacun quand ils se redressent »

Savio éclate de rire.

À la plage, Fatima rejoint ses amis qui jouent au volleyball.
Savio la suit. « Regarde, Fatima, on trouve des dizaines d'angles droits sur le filets ».
Il s'efforce de les compter pendant que Fatima s'amuse.

« Fatima, il faut rentrer ! »
Elle n'a pas vu le temps passer.
« Fatima, un angle droit sur l'horloge ! »
« Oh zut, il est déjà six heures et quart » constate Fatima.
Savio et Fatima disent au revoir à leurs amis et filent à la maison.

Maman leur a laissé un plat entier de cookies au chocolat sur la table.

« Miam, ils sont très bons ces angles droits » dit Savio.

« Arrête de faire l'intéressant, Savio ! Et maintenant il faut vraiment que je finisse mes devoirs » dit Fatima.

On peut trouver tellement d'angles droits !
Tu veux t'amuser à les compter ?
